The Art of the Engine Driver Steven Carroll 2012-12-18 On a hot summer's night in the 1950s, the old and the new, diesel and steam, town and country all collide - and nobody will be left unaffected. As a passenger train leaves Spencer Street Station on its haul to Sydney, a family of three - Vic, Rita and their son Michael - are off to a party. George Bedser has invited the whole neighbourhood to celebrate the engagement of his daughter. Vic is an engine driver, with dreams of being like his hero Paddy Ryan and becoming the master of the smooth ride. As the neighbours walk to the party, we are drawn into the lives of a bully, a drunk, a restless girl and a young boy forced to grow up before he is ready. THE ART OF THE ENGINE DRIVER is a luminous and evocative tale of ordinary suburban lives, told with an extraordinary power. Modelling the Scheduling of Train Drivers Margaret Parker 1993
Abstract: "The application of a bus driver scheduling system using linear programming with heuristics, to the problem of scheduling train drivers in the United Kingdom is described. The speed with which the existing proven system could be amended to model this new situation was of the utmost importance. It was required to produce a model which would allow the user to explore the consequences of implementing possible changes to an existing set of rules for constructing train driver schedules and to determine quickly whether the proposed changes would produce desirable schedules. The prototype was developed on a set of data relating to one depot, and in the first instance the existing constraints were modelled. The data set was then extended to include more depots. Testing on another set of data which exhibited different features to the original, enabled the model to be more thoroughly checked, and allowed the user the opportunity to become familiar with using it. Methods were developed which enabled new styles of constraints to be modelled, and the system had to maintain a degree of flexibility to cater for rules which only became necessary as work and testing progressed. The problems which were encountered in modifying the existing system to embrace the practices of railway operation are outlined. Because of the time constraints placed upon the exercise both the model and the data input were the subject of some simplifying assumptions. However, the ease of use of the model by the user and the degree to which the model was successfully used, demonstrated the viability of the project."

She misses crafting dolls, but she isn't going to make another puppet or date another woman. Definitely not! Come springtime, old flame Evie Fine offers a cash prize for the best Easter doll. Beatti wonders if her ex wants to lure her back to the toy business or if she seeks to rekindle their relationship. Either way, temptation is difficult to resist and Beatti eventually crafts a new doll. Pokio ... Oh, Pokio, a feisty doll with cheek aplenty. She insults Beatti from the get-go and proves to be more than a handful. Worse, Pokio can read her mistress's innermost thoughts, and can spot a fib a mile away. Workforce Development Tom Short 2014-07-02 This book is the second in a series of two volumes that reviews a broad range of strategies and practices undertaken as workplace development activities in a post-global financial crisis period when organisational volatility and survival were foremost in the minds of leaders. Drawing mainly from a wide range of major research projects conducted Australia and with some contributions from international authors, this second book is a compilation of contemporary themes and applications that were developed from individual research projects. During the global financial crisis, the Australian economy out-performed many other developed countries, but it was not immune from international pressures such as global competition, market fluctuations and an increasingly mobile workforce. These issues are reflected in many of the chapters and the combined work will inform readers about the major workforce development challenges facing public and private sector organisations. The book blends relevant literature with rich empirical evidence gathered from large and small organisations and includes application tools developed by researchers who are experts in their field. This book will be of scholarly interest to a broad audience of academics, industry leaders, human resource practitioners and students in adult education, business, psychology and social science disciplines. Moreover, the book will be of interest to education and training professionals, management consultants, and more generally, people who follow the evolution of work and its impact on contemporary society.

The Train Driver and Other Plays Athol Fugard 2012-10-09 The latest works by one of the world's foremost playwrights.

Modern Trains and Splendid Stations Martha Thorne 2001 "Inter-city rail travel is one of the dominant facts of modern life. From the early nineteenth century, when the first train stations - "cathedrals of technology," buildings without precedent in the history of architecture - were constructed, these focal points of transportation have enjoyed a unique status in public life. They have come a long way from the simple wooden shed erected in Liverpool, England, in 1830." "In the wake of the rail renaissance of the 1980s and 1990s, new train stations, from the U.S. to Japan, must respond to increasingly complex challenges, as high-speed trains become more and more common and the next generation of magnetically levitated trains approaches. The state-of-the-art examples featured in Modern Trains and Splendid Stations are analyzed from several perspectives: as generators of urban renewal; as new architectural icons; and as connecting points from different means of transportation. Such internationally renowned architects as Helmut Jahn (in the United States), Nicholas Grimshaw (in England), and Arata Isozaki (in Japan) have all been involved in station design."--BOOK JACKET.Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America, Inc. A Man Derailed Paul Holmes 2011-06-01 Description 'A Cry for Help' is the follow-up to Stephen's very successful 'A Cry For Help' and continues his first book's theme highlighting the constant struggles of living with OCD. Stephen has a terrible fear, amongst others, of harming an elderly lady. Having to continually check that each and every elderly woman he passed in the street or came into everyday contact had not suffered at his hands. 'A Cry Forever' tackles how this obsession has altered Stephen's life, further periods in custody are discussed as are Stephen's experiences of forming relationships and starting a family hindered by ever-present obsessions. About the Author Stephen Drake was born in Surrey in 1970 and was diagnosed with OCD in 1989, having spent periods in jail due to the condition. Further custody followed as stress heightened his obsessions. Psychometric Tests (the Ultimate Guide) Richard McMunn 2010-11 Belles and Whistles Andrew Martin 2014-09-04 In the heroic days of rail travel, you could dine on kippers and champagne aboard the Brighton Belle; smoke a post-prandial cigar as the Golden Arrow closed in on Paris, or be shaved by the Flying Scotsman's on-board barber. Everyone from schoolboys to socialites knew of these glamorous 'named trains' and aspired to ride aboard them. In Belles and Whistles, Andrew Martin recreates these famous train journeys by travelling aboard their nearest modern day equivalents. Sometimes their names have survived, even if only as a footnote on a timetable leaflet, but what has usually - if not always - disappeared is the extravagance and luxury. As Martin explains how we got from there to here, evocations of the Golden Age contrast with the starker modern reality: from monogrammed cutlery to stirring sticks, from silence on trains to tannoy announcements, from compartments to airline seating. For those who wonder whatever happened to porters, dining cars, mellow lighting, timetables, luggage in advance, trunk murders, the answers are all here. Martin's five journeys add up to an idiosyncratic history of Britain's railways, combining humour, historical anecdote and reportage from the present and romantic evocations of the past.

The Train Leaving Salisbury Kenny Rukovo 2021-06-20 " The Train Leaving Salisbury" (Four decades of memories - an African Railway story) authored by Kenny Rukovo is a narration of his experiences growing up as a child whose parents were hired by the then Rhodesia Railways on the same day and subsequently worked together at the same railway clinic from 1963 to 2000 before retirement. Mr and Mrs Ngara who are Kenny's parents were nurses manning a railway clinic catering for railway employees and their families. They worked in a unique department of the Rhodesia Railways which later became National Railways of Zimbabwe in 1980 following attainment of Zimbabwe's independence. Their department was responsible for upgrading the rail size from the smaller size 60 and 80 lbs to 91 lbs and replacing teak wooden sleepers with concrete sleepers throughout the railway system in the country. This therefore meant transferring from one station or siding to another frequently following work progress by Track laying crews. This brought about challenges of finding permanent school placements for their children Kenny, Christopher, Petronella and Moses. This also called for intensive and extensive train travel for the family to access boarding schools, cities and the family rural home in Gokwe district of Zimbabwe. After graduating from high school Kenny, who had developed a strong passion for working as an Engineman (train driver) also was hired by the National Railways of Zimbabwe as a Personnel Clerk in 1983 hoping to change grades to Engineman later. This however never happened until he retired early in 2001. Kenny got married to Nessie in 1986. Nessie was also hired by the National Railways of Zimbabwe as a Typist Clerk in 1987. Both families became permanently stationed at Rutenga station. Kenny and Nessie later transferred to the city of Bulawayo following Kenny's promotion to Job Analyst in 1988. Kenny's railway experience as a child and later as an employee, is filled with very interesting adventures. The couple later decided to migrate to Canada with their three children Zviko, Cleopatra and Petronella in 2001. The railway life experience is as unique as the railway industry itself. Many former railway employees become lifetime railway enthusiasts wherever they live across the globe. The saying goes " A railway employee graduates to a railwayman". Enjoy this story of an African child who grow up seeing and riding trains which he became bonded to for life.
